COURSE DESCRIPTION, OBJECTIVES & CME INFORMATION

Heart failure remains a major public health problem in the U.S. despite considerable advances in our understanding of its causes and the development of new approaches for treatment. To meet the substantial challenges posed by the growing heart failure population and improve outcomes in our patients, the 23rd Annual San Diego Heart Failure Symposium has been structured to highlight important emerging strategies in a series of talks and discussions aimed at helping the audience discover the best means of utilizing new approaches in managing patients. Topics that will be covered extend from preventing heart failure by managing risk factors to treating heart failure in all its stages. During the Symposium, there will be in-depth discussion of topics ranging from drugs to devices and non-pharmacologic treatments to invasive monitoring approaches.

In order to cover the wide range of exciting topics, the expanded Symposium will start Friday afternoon and extend through late Saturday afternoon. The Friday sessions will present some of the most stimulating talks of the entire meeting and will be followed by an outstanding industry sponsored reception and lecture. The 3rd Annual Stanley Lloyd M.D. lecture at this year's meeting will be presented by Dr. Christopher O'Connor, editor in chief JACC: Heart Failure and President Elect of Heart Failure Society of America. As in the past, the Symposium offers a unique opportunity to meet and interact with both your colleagues and the renowned faculty that has been assembled from UCSD and other institutions. I hope that you will be able to join us for both the Friday afternoon and Saturday sessions of the 23rd Annual San Diego Heart Failure Symposium. I very much look forward to seeing you there.

SYMPOSIUM OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this program, the participant should be able to:

1. Summarize current and emerging treatments for heart failure, describe new guideline updates and provide practical information to help in the implementation of recommended therapies in individual patients.
2. Review strategies for implementing medical and device therapies that will enhance prevention and lead to improved outcomes in heart failure patients.
3. Define how specific populations including minorities, women and the elderly respond to various approaches to treating hypertension and heart failure.

TARGET AUDIENCE

The target audience for this activity includes cardiologists, internists, primary care physicians, nurses and allied healthcare professionals.

SYMPOSIUM CANCELLATIONS

If your registration must be cancelled and a refund of your fee is desired, your fee, less $50 for administrative costs, will be refunded upon receipt of a written request that includes your signature. No refunds will be made after May 30, 2017. Please allow up to 12 weeks for a refund.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Heart failure (HF) is common, affecting nearly 5 million Americans. It is also one of the few cardiovascular disorders for which prevalence figures are increasing. An estimated 670,000 new cases of heart failure are diagnosed each year and this condition is a major cause of morbidity and mortality (80% of men and 70% of women less than 65 years of age who have HF will die within 8 years). Overall, heart failure is the number one cause of hospitalizations of the elderly in the U.S.

Knowledge about heart failure is accumulating so rapidly that individual clinicians may be unable to readily and adequately synthesize new information into effective strategies of care for patients with this syndrome. This year's Symposium will provide a comprehensive overview of current evidence based therapies and treatment strategies as well as emerging approaches for treatment.
